Questions (Public):

1. Please describe what has motivated you to run for and serve in public office. What is your vision for Alaska? How does that vision intersect with issues like clean water and air, healthy salmon habitat, climate change, and a strong democracy? (150 words or less)

Questions (Confidential):

2. Climate change is one of the most pressing crises facing our planet, and communities in Alaska statewide are already experiencing its devastating impacts. Severe increasing temperatures, droughts, record-breaking forest fires, melting ice and permafrost, species migration and decreasing salmon returns, and sea level rise and erosion have and will continue to threaten the health and safety of this and future generations.
Do you acknowledge that human actions are a significant contributor to climate change? Will your actions to stop climate change match the urgency of its effects in Alaska?
3. Transitioning to a 100 percent clean energy economy is necessary to avert the worst impacts of climate change while creating good jobs, boosting our economy, saving consumers money, and protecting our health. Clean energy has grown rapidly as technology prices have plummeted. However, Alaska's economy and government services are heavily dependent on oil extraction, the emissions of which are a major contributor to climate change.
Do you support transitioning to 100 percent clean energy no later than 2050 to help build pollution-free communities?
(mark one) YES / NO
Optional: Why or why not? (100 words or less)

4. The Climate Action for Alaska Leadership Team in 2018 stated that “The changing climate offers Alaska both challenges and opportunities to innovate and develop a vision for a sustainable and vibrant future. To increase Alaska’s resilience, the State must develop solutions that account for and respond to the scale and speed of change, while working to stop or slow the negative impacts on water, land, and human systems.”
With solutions in mind, what specific policies at the state level do you support to reduce our state’s carbon emissions and slow the harm of climate change?

5. We understand that issues of racial equity and social justice have a direct correlation to issues of environmental protection and democracy. Climate impacts our health, our safety, and our livelihoods. Climate change’s impacts hit rural Alaska Native communities the hardest, exacerbating racial and economic inequities. Villages like Shishmaref, Kivalina, and Newtok/Metarvik are facing relocation and negative impacts on subsistence hunting and gathering, building infrastructure loss from permafrost melt, dangerous unsteady ice pathways, river erosion collapsing homes, and more. Additionally, the communities most affected by climate change, pollution, and environmental injustice are often the same communities that have been traditionally left out of the democratic process: Alaska Native and rural communities, people of color, women, and young people under 35. We believe that access to free and fair elections is one of the core democratic values we hold dear as Alaskans, and that all Alaskans have the right to meaningfully engage in, and influence, the decisions impacting their resources and communities.

How would you pursue policies to promote equity for communities most directly impacted by climate change and most often left out of our democratic processes?

6. Pebble is a massive deposit of copper and gold, located at the headwaters of Bristol Bay’s Kvichak and Nushagak Rivers. If built, Pebble would be one of the largest mines of its kind in the world capable of generating 11 billion tons of toxic waste. For over a decade, Alaska Natives, sportsmen, commercial fishermen and many others have vocally opposed the development of the Pebble Mine in Bristol Bay.

Do you support the Pebble Mine?

(mark one) YES / NO

7. This year, Alaskans will be voting on whether a constitutional convention should be held to make changes to our founding document. We believe a constitutional convention is unnecessary, expensive, and dangerous.

Do you support a Constitutional Convention?

(mark one) YES / NO / MAYBE

If not, how will you support the campaign against a convention? (100 words or less)

8. This year is the first election under a new open primary and ranked-choice general voting system. The Alaska Center believes that in a ranked choice environment it is critical for voters to rank multiple candidates that share their values. This helps prevent a “spoiler effect” that could otherwise help unacceptable candidates win. The Alaska Center may choose to make ranked endorsements for the general election.

I understand that The Alaska Center may issue a ranked endorsement of multiple candidates in my race.

(mark one) YES / NO

I will encourage voters to rank other candidate(s) in my race endorsed by The Alaska Center after me. (We will ask any other candidate that we endorse to also commit that they will advocate for ranking YOU second)

(mark one) YES / NO / MAYBE

9. Alaska has a robust early and absentee voting program that allows hard working Alaskans to vote on weekends and in advance of election day, and we overwhelmingly passed the 2016 Permanent Fund Automatic Voter Registration Initiative to help make registering to vote or updating registration accessible. However, voting rights are under attack in 2022. Like many other states, Alaska has seen an increase in public skepticism over the security of our elections – and in particular vote-by-mail - fueled by rhetoric from the 2020 national election. We believe that the more Alaskans get involved in the decisions affecting our home, the better the future will be for everyone. Increasing the number of Alaskans who vote is at the core of our strategy to promote a strong and healthy democracy.

What will you do to protect or expand voting rights for all Alaskans? Would you support the Alaska Division of Elections moving to a vote at home (also known as vote by mail) process in order to increase access to voting for many Alaskans?

10. We believe that investing in the education, leadership, and civic engagement of our young people is critical to the long-term sustainability of our state.
- How would you inspire or encourage young Alaskans to participate in the political process?

11. Have you read and signed our expected Code of Conduct (below)?
